Sea turtles are reptiles that live in the ocean. They are ancient animal that have been around for over 100 million years even before the dinosaurs. Today, sea turtles are endangered species too. If we don't protect them, they will soon be gone forever.

Sea turtles are endangered for many reasons. Some people eat them or their eggs even though it is not allowed. Other people damage sea turtles' nests. This makes it harder for sea turtles to lay eggs. When people throw rubbish like plastic bags, the sea turtles may get stuck inside it and some others might it. Some factories also throw some chemicals in the sea which also damages the turtles' habitat.

Many people and especially scientists work hard to protect the sea turtles so they do not die. What can you do to help? When you go to the beach, make sure not to leave any trash behind. If you see a turtle nest in the sand, do not touch it or move the eggs. Avoid beach campfires during the time the turtles are preparing their nests to lay eggs.
