Get your passport ready! Today we are travelling through time with one of the greatest explorers you have probably never heard of, Ibn Battuta.

In 1304, Ibn Battuta was born in Morocco. Ibn Battuta's father, Abdallah, was a judge in Tangier. He was a curious boy with a love for adventure. At just 21 years old, he set off to make a pilgrimage to Mecca. He explored parts of Africa on his way to Mecca. But he did not stop there. That journey to Mecca turned into a lifetime of exploration. Ibn Battuta did not just visit nearby lands; he crossed deserts on camels, sailed stormy seas, and explored mountainous roads. In Egypt, he admired the pyramids and its busy streets. He continued travelling through Syria, Iraq, and Persia. He met scholars, sultans, and saw ancient wonders.

Ibn Battuta journeyed all the way to India, where he worked as a judge for the sultan of Delhi and explored amazing palaces. The sultan liked Ibn Battuta because he was clever and knew a lot about laws and travel. Ibn Battuta saw big palaces and busy markets. He also joined special events and met many important people.

To explore new places, Ibn Battuta went on dangerous sea journeys. He faced many dangers like storms, pirates, and even shipwrecks. He made it all the way to China, visiting cities and even riding boats along the Grand Canal. He liked the advanced culture and technology in China. After 29 years of travel and over 75,000 miles, he finally returned home to Morocco.

The Sultan of Morocco asked him to share his stories. Ibn Battuta wrote a travel book called "The Rihla" which means "The Journey." It was like a magical travel blog filled with wild adventures, faraway lands, and fascinating people. He learned new languages, tasted exotic foods, and made friends from every walk of life.

Today, Ibn Battuta is remembered as one of the greatest travellers in history. The Ibn Battuta Mall in Dubai was named after him.

VII- Summary Making (6 Marks)

Read the following passage, then do as required.

Nature has a great impact on our well-being. Studies show that spending time in green spaces can reduce stress and improve mood. Activities like hiking, gardening, or simply walking in a park allow us to connect with the natural world. Additionally, exposure to sunlight increases our vitamin D levels, which is essential for our physical health. Engaging with nature can also enhance creativity. Finally, spending time outdoors can lead to a more balanced and fulfilling life, making it an essential aspect of maintaining overall wellness.

In a paragraph of FOUR sentences ONLY, summarise and paraphrase the passage above in answer to the following question:

How does spending time in nature affect our well-being?

- Reducing stress /... improving mood
- Allowing to connect with the natural world
- Increasing our vitamin D levels / ... enhancing creativity
- Leading to a more balanced and fulfilling life
