Are supermarkets designed to persuade us to buy more? When you enter a supermarket, the manager knows better than you do ; how you will behave , which way you will walk, where you will look, what will make you buy something rather than another. The layout of a supermarket is designed to take shoppers around the store ,from left to right. Then, shoppers will pay attention to all the products.

Fresh fruits and vegetables are shown near supermarket entrance. This gives the impression that only healthy food is sold in the shop. Basic food that everyone buys, like sugar and tea are not put next to each other. They are kept in different places so customers go past other attractive goods before they find them. In this way shoppers are encouraged to buy than they really need.

Customers also buy more when the shelves are full than they are half – empty. They do not like to buy from shelves with few products on them because they feel there is something wrong with those products.
