READING COMPREHENSION

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions that follow:

The changing of the seasons is a fascinating natural phenomenon. As the Earth goes around the Sun, different parts of the planet receive different amounts of sunlight throughout the year. This variation causes the seasons to change, each bringing its own unique weather patterns and features.

Spring is the season that follows winter. It is a time when the weather starts to warm up, and the days become longer. Trees and plants begin to grow, and flowers start to appear. Many animals, such as birds and butterflies, return from their winter journeys. Spring is often seen as a season of renewal and growth. It's a time when the world seems to come alive after the cold months of winter.

Summer comes after spring and is known for its warm temperatures and long, sunny days. People often go on vacations, have picnics, and spend time outdoors enjoying activities like swimming and hiking. Summer is a popular time for families to travel and explore new places. In many areas, summer also brings occasional thunderstorms and heavy rains, which help to keep the environment rich and green.

Autumn, or fall, follows summer and is characterized by cooler temperatures and shorter days. The leaves on trees change color. They turn into red, orange, and yellow before falling to the ground. Autumn is a time for preparing for the coming winter, as animals gather food and people start to use their warm clothing again.

Winter is the final season of the year. It is known for its cold temperatures, and in many places, it brings snow and ice, so people often spend more time indoors. Winter days are shorter. This season is a time for cozy fires and hot drinks. Although it can be chilly, winter also offers beautiful snowy landscapes and opportunities for winter sports like skiing and ice skating.

VI- READING COMPREHENSION: (80 Marks)

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

People think children should play sports. Sports are fun, and children stay healthy while playing with others. However, playing sports can have negative effects on children. It may produce feelings of poor self-esteem or aggressive behaviour in some children.

According to research on children and sports, 40 million children play sports in the US. Of these, 18 million say they have been yelled at or called names while playing sports. This leaves many children with a bad impression of sports. They think sports are just too aggressive. Many researchers believe adults, especially parents and coaches, are the main cause of too much aggression in children's sports. They believe children copy aggressive adult behaviour. This behaviour is then further reinforced through both positive and negative feedback.

Parents and coaches are powerful teachers because children usually look up to them. Often these adults behave aggressively themselves, sending children the message that winning is everything. At children's sporting events, parents may yell insults at other players or cheer when their child behaves aggressively. As well, children may be taught that hurting other players is acceptable, or they may be pushed to continue playing even when they are injured.

In addition, the media makes violence seem exciting. Children watch adult sports games and see violent behaviour replayed over and over on television. As a society, we really need to face up to this problem and do something about it . Parents and coaches should act as better examples for children. They also need to teach children better values. They should teach children to enjoy themselves whether they win or not. It is not necessary to knock yourself out to enjoy sports. Winning is not everything. In addition, children should not be allowed to continue to play when they are injured. Sending a child with an injury into a game gives the child the message that health is not as important as winning. If we make some basic changes, children might learn to enjoy sports again.
