I'm Jim Robert from London. I'm a journalist in a famous newspaper. Yesterday I had a very interesting interview with a famous businessman here in London, Frank Hawkins. During the interview Frank was telling me about his experiences as an ambitious young man. Frank is now the head of a very large company, but as a boy he used to work with his father in a small shop in their village. It was his job to repair bicycles and at that time he used to work fifteen hours a day. He saved money for years and in 1938 he moved to London and he bought a small work-shop of his own.

During the war Frank used to make spare parts for planes. At that time two workers were helping him. By the end of the war, the small work-shop had become a large factory which employed seven hundred and twenty-eight people. Frank smiled when he remembered his hard early years and the long road to success. He was still smiling when the door opened and his wife came in. She wanted him to repair their son's bicycle.
