VI- Reading Comprehension & Summary Making (150 Marks)

150

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

I grew up in a small farming town in the American Midwest, Ohio. It was the 1970s, and my family lived in an old three-storey house on a piece of land on a quiet, tree-lined street. It was one of those small towns where everyone knew each other, and people seldom even bothered to lock their doors.

There was nothing special about my childhood. It was the childhood of thousands of other kids, growing up in a small town in the rural U.S. My friends and I ran barefoot all summer long. We swam in the rivers and ponds, and played hide-and-seek in the woods. It was a safe, simple, and peaceful way to grow up.

In my teens, I started to realise that there was a whole world outside of our little town. The more I learned about that world, the more I craved to leave, to go out on my own, explore, and create my own story. After graduating from university, I did just that. I packed my bags, travelled halfway around the world, and never looked back.

I have lived in Tokyo, Japan, for over twenty years now. For the most part, it has been an amazing adventure, and I am thrilled every day to wake up and know that I am a part of one of the world's biggest and most exciting cities.

Over the years, I have only returned to Ohio a few times for weddings, funerals, or the occasional side trip when I happen to be in another part of the U.S. for business or some other reason. It is always wonderful to catch up with family and old friends, to spend most of the time talking with mom, and eat her cooking. In the morning, I wander around the countryside to fill my lungs with the fresh air.

I returned to my hometown this past summer. The trip was only ten days long, and besides visiting family and friends, it was boring as usual. But as I looked around the place where I had grown up, I realised something. Even though I have travelled thousands of miles over the years, even though I now spend my days using a language my family cannot understand, and even though I now call a place on the other side of the planet, 'home,' there will always be a part of that quiet, little Ohio town in me. Somehow, just knowing that feels really great.
